

Raddlebarn Primary School

Our behaviour system Reception

Please read this booklet to find out how our new behaviour system works. The children have responded really positively to it, so please ask them all about it .

Zone Board

Inside this booklet is an explanation of how Raddlebarn's behaviour system works. The zone board rewards positive attitudes towards learning and behaviour while addressing poor behaviour as and when it happens in a visual way. Within this process, children have the restorative option of 'putting it right' as well as clear visual cues for how to do well.

An example of "Putting it right" would be a child moving down the zone board for shouting out, but then trying hard to remember to put their hand up and consequently moving back up the zone board.

How it works

Everyone starts the day in the green zone. Children can move up and down the zone board throughout the day dependent on their Behavior choices. They move up for positive behaviour and down for poor behaviour. Any children who reach gold will be put in the gold book and will be mentioned in Special Mentions assembly.

As children move up through the zones they receive rewards. (See right hand side of the chart).

Examples of behaviour for which children move up the Zone Board :

- Acts of kindness
- Effort in work
- Contributing to discussions
- Being helpful
- Demonstrating sustained concentration

If children move down the Zone Board they incur consequences. Children move down the zone board for poor behaviour, this is recorded in the behaviour folder. Children who move into red at any point during the school day will receive an entry into the Red Book and have a letter sent home.

Examples of behaviours for which children move down the zone board;

- Shouting out
- Not responding to instructions
- Distracting others
- Talking when they should be listening
- Not using kind hands and feet

However, on very rare occasions pupils may move straight into the 'red zone' for more serious instances of poor behaviour.

Red book

Examples of behaviour which children move immediately into the red zone and receive a red book letter.

- Using inappropriate language
- Deliberate pushing with intent to hurt
- Biting
- Stealing
- Damaging school property
- Repeatedly not following instructions

Red book entries are few and far between. However, should this happen, parents will be involved in the process, this may involve a conversation with the class teacher or another member of staff.

A Restorative School

As a restorative school we support and encourage children to reflect on their behaviour, develop their social skills and take accountability for their behaviour to become responsible citizens.
